“We outlined our major issues to Canada Post at the very beginning of the negotiation process, almost a year ago, and clearly stated that we would not sign any agreements that don’t address overwork and overburdening, equality and full-time jobs,” says Mike Palecek, CUPW National President. “Our position hasn’t changed. We aren’t just bargaining for today, we are bargaining for the future – for our members and everyone who relies on the postal service.”

While both sides remain at the bargaining table, CUPW members are still without agreements for the Urban Postal Operations and Rural and Suburban Mail Carriers (RSMC) bargaining units.
